Dear Sir/Madam,

Re: Junior Product Manager

It is with great enthusiasm that I apply for the position of Junior Product Manager. I am a Master of Business Information Systems graduate from Monash University and looking for the best possible start for a successful career.

I describe myself as someone who is driven by creativity, persistence and can-do attitude in learning new skills to excel in any work environment. Previously I have completed Bachelor of Technology in Electronics and Communication Engineering at Heritage Institute of Technology, securing 76%. During my Bachelor's degree, I took part in several extracurricular activities, such as building a web app with C# using ASP.NET, taking internship with one of the leading Telecom Companies of India, BSNL and various other volunteering activities such as taking part in the Sports team committee that successfully organised Soccer tournament in my college.

I have gathered valuable experience during my studies and improved my employment skills in different sectors. For instance, during BTECH, I worked for a Retail Bearing Store for more than 2 years and strategically helped the company to improve their business prospects mainly interacting with clients internationally. During my penultimate year, I was selected as an intern for Globsyn Group where I have demonstrated strong technical and leadership skills to develop a website on Faculty Recruitment System.

In my post-graduation, I have been active throughout helping the community by participating in various volunteering events such as Knox City Council Festival and Monash Graduation Ceremony. I have also worked for World Vision as a Fundraising Promoter and Senior Fundraising Promoter demonstrating strong work ethic, customer focus and persistence to solve problems tactfully and creativity in empowering the people in Melbourne while helping the organization for their cause to help underprivileged children to fulfil their dreams. I have also been selected as an intern for DEDJTR where I have demonstrated strong research and liaison skills to develop a report on trade and investments between China and Victoria over the last 2 centuries and presented in front of notable stakeholders of high positions in the State Victorian office

The Junior Product Manager role offered by Alogic provides me an opportunity to work for an organisation where I can demonstrate my strong analysis and customer service acumen. I have the hunger to go extra mile for the team and customers which makes me an ideal fit for the opportunity. I possess the passion in can-do attitude to solve any problems related with products, strong teamwork and add value to the products customers buy which is demonstrated in my workplace which will eventually help me to excel in an environment with tight-deadlines and the energy I showcase will help Alogic to achieve its targets.

Thank you for reviewing my application and I will be looking forward to discussing with you about the position very soon.

Yours Sincerely,
Akash Sengupta
