Right of the image and image gallery is the critical information for the product. At the top is the product title, followed by the part code (which can be changed dynamically depending on the options selected), a summary blurb, stock status, options to show the differents SKUs available for the product (it shows length and colour but things can be added or removed depending on need of the specific product), then it shows the RRP which can be changed dynamically depending on which SKU is selected.

This bar will contain download links to the specsheet (it will be hidden and unhidden depending if there's a specsheet available). It will also contain a slideout accordion section for resellers and distributors.

The specsheets button automatically downloads the linked PDF.

This is the section for more general and in-depth information. At the left will be a navigation bar that will allow you to navigate between 4 different tabs: Overview, Specification, Connection Guides and downloads. The main body should be flexible and easily formatted with both images and text. The downloads section will have relevant download links like specsheets, technical drawings or drivers.

The Part No. field will change dynamically depending on which options are chosen

We will have 2 styles to select the different options. Radio style buttons (such as the length option on this example) and drop down menus for options that are more varied in the number of characters they contain (such as the colour option on this example). The currently selected options are highlighted in yellow. The product page will always default to the first options of each field.

Options can be added or removed depending on need.

Certain options (such as the colour option in this example) will be able to change the product image to show what that option would look like. The option can also affect the fields of the other options (for example, the pink version of this cable will not have a 5m option)

On click, the “View all Resellers” or “View all distributors” accordian tab will expand to show a row of logos of the resellers. The logos by default will be grayed out and faded. There’s a maximum width for the accordian tab and if it exceeds that the rest of the logos will be hidden and revealed with navigation controls and also a scroll bar. On click they will go to the product page that the logo is linked to.
